Bethel with its Androscoggin does not have to read the newspapers to know when freshets are the order of the day. During the rain which has lasted, well, since goodness knows when, the river has steadily risen until the bridges and several rods of road on Alder river and the mill brook are submerged. Those who have thousands of dollars in lumber along the river, have entertained serious anxiety as to the outcome of the freshet, but as yet no damage has been reported and it is hoped that the danger has passed. The ice still holds in the river.

George A. Plaisted.

Again death has entered our village and claimed one of our well-known townsmen; yes, perhaps we may say one of our best known townsmen, for we doubt if there is another man in Bethel who has as wide an acquaintance as did George A. Plaisted who passed away at his home in our village last Thursday afternoon. His death came as a great surprise to all his neighbors and friends, as he had been sick but a very few days.

On Sunday, March 24, he noticed the appearance of a mild cold and during the following week he was confined to the house with the grip. It was not, however, until Monday afternoon, April 1, that any fears were entertained as to the seriousness of the case. From this time his cold very rapidly developed into a very obstinate case of pneumonia which baffled the skill of his physicians and resulted in death three days later.

George A. Plaisted was born in Biddeford, Nov. 17, 1846, where he spent his early life. When he came to Oxford county, he went into the carriage shop of R. F. Allen of Milton to learn his trade as a carriage builder. He remained with Mr. Allen for a time and then came to Bethel and finished his trade with Mr. Pinckney Burnham, after which he opened a business for himself where A. C. Frost's blacksmith shop now stands.

He did not follow the carriage business but a short time, but opened a lively business which he followed nearly thirty years or until his death. He has carried the mail for over twenty years, and has delivered the express for ten years. From the nature of his business he was brought in touch with everyone. All knew him, and all will miss him; in fact we have missed him every day, missed him from our streets, missed his calls at our houses and places of business, missed him at the trains, and we shall not only miss him for a long time to come, but many, strangers to the rest of us, who come and go will miss him as well.

The funeral occurred at the Methodist church last Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Mr. Barton, assisted by Rev. Mr. Eldridge and Rev. Mr. Varley. Although the rain came in torrents, a large number of our citizens were present to pay their last respects to their departed friend. The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, of which Mr. Plaisted was a member, attended in a body. The floral tributes were among the handsomest that we have ever seen in Bethel, conspicuous among which was a large scroll bearing the word "Rest," given by the business men of Bethel and Bethel friends, also a very handsome pillow by the family. In addition to these were Easter lilies, potted plants, pinks, ferns, smilax, in short, a beautiful collection of cut flowers, given by the Rebekahs and various friends and neighbors.

Music was furnished by a quartette consisting of Dr. Sturdivant, Miss Jane Gibson, Miss Alice Purinton, and Prof. Wight, with Miss Mabel Rand as accompanist.

L. B. Hopkins spent Saturday in Norway.

Miss Annie Turner has returned to Bethel after spending a few weeks in the fashion centers, bringing with her the latest spring styles and is now ready to serve the ladies of Bethel and vicinity. The newest hats are somewhat odd in shape, being almost flat, but with the lavish use of chiffon, lace, and other dainty textiles, when trimmed are really artistic. The flowers and buds are both natural and unnatural, so that none need lack for the shade needed to carry out any idea of color. All the novelties in the line of spring millinery may be found at Bethel's millinery store. The popular colors promise to be the pastel blues and pinks, while light browns will be in high favor. It is none too early to order your hat while the stock is now complete and you are more liable to find what your fancy dictates than if you wait two or three weeks. Call and see the goods anyway and if you see, you will purchase.

ADDRESS.

Delivered by Rev. Arthur Varley Before the Columbian Club.

"Life without Industry is guilt, Industry without Art is Brutality." I want to make this expression taken from a catalogue of "The Roy Crafters," the basis of my address this evening. This expression puts into strong terms a great fact which, if thoroughly appreciated, and acted upon by all classes and conditions of men, especially if allowed to mould and color the relations of men as they are dependent upon each other's labor, would thoroughly revolutionize human society. There are two propositions before us. One is that idleness is a crime, or if you would rather I should state the proposition the other way, work is what saves existence from becoming a criminal thing. The other is that Work into which the whole spirit and the very best spirit of the man—for this I take to be the meaning of Art in this connection—is not put, is little, if any more than brutal. I interpret this term Industry or work in the broadest sense of which I have any conception. It does not refer to any particular kind of labor, as physical or mental, but to intelligent, purposeful activity. And before discussing the two propositions before us I want to emphasize the fact that work in this sense is a fundamental, creative principle. This fact is supported by the story of the stars and the testimony of the rocks. We may go back and study the beginnings of scientific thought; we may lay out before us the different systems of Grecian philosophy; and though these may be wide differences in their reflection on and their conceptions of Being or Existence, yet on this point there is no controversy whatever. To those early philosophers there was an intelligent order and end in Creation, and this intelligent order and end must of necessity rest upon an intelligent and purposeful activity. And so we may wander among the stars, and dig into the earth, and trace the story of the rocks and the hills back and back until our mind grows almost dizzy in its flight, and we are brought down to this principle. And here at least between Science and Religion there is no controversy. In the Hebrew's cosmogony we find the ground upon which the primal right of man to a place in the world is based: "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." We may deny the letter through which this fact is given us, but we cannot deny the fact itself. To this, Science lends itself heartily, and here we find man's dominion determined and his work laid out for him. Break down this principle wherever you may be, and you destroy your primal right to an existence. It is only as scientists, teachers, reformers, and philanthropists have recognized and worked upon this principle that they have attained any influence or distinction whatever. And it is only as the most skilled workman and the cheapest, most unskilled laborer recognizes this same principle that they are at all worthy the place they hold. So at the very beginning I want you to get thoroughly hold of this truth. Into the very order and evolution of Creation; into the very texture of human life, this principle of labor, this principle of conscious, conscientious, whole-souled activity is woven. A principle which no man however high or however low, however exalted or however humble can disregard with impunity. A principle without which Creation would be but a bungle and a blunder, and life end in an utter blankness.

I. "LIFE WITHOUT INDUSTRY IS GUILT."

I accept this proposition for the reason that Industry or Labor is a fundamental, creative principle; that this principle of labor lies at the root of all existence. To go contrary to this then, that is, to neglect or refuse to direct one's energies along some definite line or lines of profitable activity is to commit sin, and to adjudge one's self guilty before an intelligent and rational order of things. Idleness is a crime. "Work, says Carlyle, is alone noble." But relative to the criminality of idleness, J. G. Holland speaks directly to the point. "Idleness is paralysis. A lazy man is necessarily a bad man, an idle is necessarily a demoralized population. The idle man stands outside of the ordained scheme of things; and the truest self-respect, the noblest independence, and the most genuine dignity are not to be found there. There is really nothing left to a genuine idle man, who possesses any considerable degree of vital power, but sin, Man's record upon this wild world is the record of work and of work alone." The most difficult social problems that face the thinker, the teacher, and the reformer to-day grow out of conditions that on the one hand tempt men to be idle and on the other hand forces idleness upon them. And sin against laws that we may read most plainly is at the root of these conditions.

There is a great hue and cry at times about the great army of the unemployed—referring to the large numbers of men who through the peculiar character of our industrial system and the competition injected into it, are forced to idle away their time, while in many cases wives and children are dependent upon them for bread. This certainly throws into human society, and brings thoughtful and serious men face to face with a very grave and far-reaching problem. But the problem that the other extreme presents to human society, is just as grave and serious in its way. The idle rich in their way, are as dangerous to the peace and happiness of the world as the idle poor. A band of unemployed workmen may strike terror to a neighborhood, and we all know the bitterness and lawlessness, the hunger and the hate that a strike engenders. But we overlook many times the abomination that a wealthy idleness succeeds in covering up. But as we read the history of at least two of the greatest empires the world has seen, we

Broken Brie-a-Braes.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's Cement.
The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why.
The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them because they are expensive and do not allow large profits.
Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 per pound and another costs $1.25 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent gels dissolved in water or dilute acid, and in some cases altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials.
Major's cement, retails at fifteen cents and twenty-five cents a barrel, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make larger profits.
The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement.
And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr.
Major's advertising, which now amounts to over $500 a month, throughout the country.
Established in 1870.

Instead of having Major's, don't accept any other brand of cement. If you are at all in a hurry (and you will be likely to find that you are) a good deal more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and any other rubber or leather article with Major's Rubber Cement and Major's Leather Cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will thus save.
If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage. July 4, 1901.

The Awakening of Hunt's Corner.

By ANNA JOHNSON.

"If it isn't snowing again! It does seem as if spring would never come."

Mrs. Elizabeth Hunt turned impatiently from the window. She was baking molasses cookies in the large pleasant room that did duty both as dining-room and kitchen.

"I never saw such a long dreary winter," she went on, drawing a pan of crisp brown cakes from the oven. "Sometimes I feel that I cannot live in this forsaken region another day."

Mrs. Hunt was a tall spare woman of forty-five. Her fair face wore a proud expression, and the light in her large gray eyes was not that of a soul at peace.

Three years before, an unfortunate investment had swept away much of the property of the Hunt's.
A large tract of pine timber land in northern Michigan was all that remained. Elizabeth had agreed to her husband's proposition that they should make their home there for a time. The one stipulation that she made was that their only child, a boy of seventeen, should remain in the high school of their home town.

Robert Hunt was an ambitious, energetic man. The three years had seen a village, called Hunt's Corners, spring up about his saw mills. A railroad connected them with the outer world, a comfortable home had been built for the Hunts, and prosperity was coming to them.

"Three years more, and we can move back home," Mr. Hunt had said that very morning to his wife.

Three years more! Could she endure them? She had no society.

Many of the workmen were foreigners. Those who were not,
were uncultured and rough. Mrs.
Hunt never associated with their families. There was no church, and it had only been a few months before that a school had been established. For weeks at a time Elizabeth Hunt never spoke to a woman. What could she have in common with these loud-voiced, untidy women whose home often consisted of a single room? And Robert had talked to her, before their coming of the good she might do.

The bitter smile that curved her lips gave place to a sigh. There was a fresh cause for uneasiness now. Hubert was at home. He had graduated from the high school the year before and had had two terms at a business college.
Now his father wished him to enter the office of the mill, but his mother refused to think of her son remaining at Hunt's Corners.

Here Mrs. Hunt's musings were interrupted by the opening of the door.

"Good morning, Mrs. Hunt. I am going to walk right in. I've knocked twice, but you didn't hear me. Let me sit right down here, and you keep on with your work."

It was Miss Sarah Pierce, the school teacher. She was past the bloom of youth, a plump little body who limped slightly and whose sole claim to beauty was a sunny smile.

Upon her arrival at Hunt's Corners, Mr. Hunt had urged his wife to cultivate her friendship. When, after a few weeks, it was evident that Miss Pierce was making friends of everybody, even the lowest, Mrs. Hunt stopped the frigid attentions she had been bestowing.
The teacher boarded with the storekeeper's wife, a woman Mrs.
Hunt considered frivolous.

While Sarah was crossing the room to the rocker her hostess coldly pointed out, she stopped, a cry of delight breaking from her lips:

"How beautiful! And your hedge shuts them off from the sight of passers. Oh, Mrs. Hunt, how happy they must make you!"

Through the open door into the sitting-room Sarah had caught sight of the bay window filled with blossoming plants. These were the owner's pride. They were also the only bits of greenery and bloom found all through the long winter in that northern town.

"May I go in and see them?" the caller asked, a gleam of childlike delight in her eyes.

Mrs. Hunt nodded. So the little teacher feasted her eyes on scarlet, pink, and white geraniums, the fragile-leaved begonias, the fragrant carnations, the pure white calla blossoms, and—best of all—the tall spikes of Easter lily buds just turning from green to white.

"I say again, Mrs. Hunt, that it must make you very happy to have all this beauty. You can share it with all and still have it for your own," Miss Pierce said, coming back to the kitchen. "Now I will tell you my errand. You know a week from to-morrow is Easter!"

Easter! What memories that word woke in the breast of Elizabeth Hunt. She recalled the Easters of long ago—the flowers, the sacred music, the early sunlight stealing through the windows of stained glass. Then there was the holy joy she had felt with the assurance of the blessed truth, "He is risen."

Easter at Hunt's Corners! Her lip curled, the responsive light died out of her eyes, and she waited in unsympathetic silence for the teacher to explain.

"Can we not have an Easter service?" Sarah's voice trembled. It would be hard to go on, but she must.

"We can have the children speak and sing. I've been training them, and they do beautifully. Of course we would open with prayer and scripture reading. Then someone —and it would have to be you, Mrs. Hunt—could tell the story of the resurrection. Why, Mrs.
Hunt, I believe there are men and women here in this village who do not know what Easter means."

"I do not doubt it," Mrs. Hunt's tone was icy. "Still, I do not see why you should expect me to—"

She stopped. Even her emphasis on the personal pronoun did not help her over the completion of the sentence. Elizabeth Hunt found herself unable to say that she did not care for the souls of her neighbors.

Miss Pierce understood. Her lips quivered, but she looked the older woman frankly in the face.

"There is only us two. You and I are the only Christians in Hunt's Corners. Some of the Italians were Catholics years ago, but as one poor woman said, they 'forgot-ted how to pray.' Think of our responsibility. Only you and I to obey our Master's command, 'Go tell my brethren.' Oh, Mrs. Hunt, how have you kept all these years from telling this wondrous story to these poor, heavily burdened men and women?"

Elizabeth Hunt's face reddened, then grew strangely pale. Just then came an interruption.

The door was thrown open, and a small boy rushed in, crying:
"Teacher, come quick! Tony's got the bandage off, and ma's afraid he'll bleed to death."

Miss Pierce waited to hear no more. She hurried away, without waiting to bid her hostess good-by.

Left alone, Mrs. Hunt was lost in thought. She stood leaning against the table until a strange odor arrested her wandering attention.

"My cookies are burning!" she exclaimed, coming back with a start to her surroundings. "How strangely she said, 'There's only us two!'"

The words had a sting. Elizabeth's husband and son were not Christians. Why were her many prayers for them still unanswered?
Was it because she had failed to carry, in her daily life, the glad news of the risen Christ?

An hour later Mr. Hunt and Hubert came home to dinner. The table was spread with its usual good cheer. The wife and mother was excited and unlike her quiet self. She asked many questions about affairs in the village, and especially about Tony, a lad who had been injured by the machinery a few days before.

Mr. Hunt shook his head. "I am afraid for the boy. He is delicious and loosens the bandage. Were it not for that plucky little teacher he would bleed to death. If there were a half dozen women like her here, Hunt's Corners might be—well, what I once hoped to make it."

The wife winced. She knew he had hoped to make the place a model village. She had called his plan a Utopian dream, making no effort to help him in this work.

The next day was Sunday. Late in the afternoon, Mrs. Hunt went for a solitary walk. As she hurried through the village, its squalid ugliness made her sick and faint.
Many women were looking "forward to nothing better. Who was it Christ had meant by "my brethren?"

The first year of their stay there, Mr. Hunt had spoken of trying to get a minister to come for an occasional service. She remembered too well her reply.

"It would be useless, Robert. The people would not go to hear him. If you mean it as a kindness to me, I thank you. Yet I am sure a little reflection will show you that I could not enjoy church services among such surroundings as these."

She had deliberately shut the door, not only upon her own attendance upon the ordinances of God's Word, but also on that of others.
And Christ had bidden his followers tell the story of his resurrection.

Mrs. Hunt had reached the outskirts of the village. The snow still lay, white and unbroken, on the stump-strewn waste that stretched before her. A road, worn smooth by the passage of great loads of logs, reached away to the forest which, in the dim gray light, looked shadowy and unreal.

Walking on, she came face to face with Sarah Pierce. Both women stopped.

"Come with me," Mrs. Hunt said. "I must talk to some one,
and you will understand."

Miss Pierce hesitated. "I promised—" she began, but Elizabeth interrupted her.

"Don't refuse me. In all Hunt's Corners there is no woman who needs your help as I do."

They walked and talked until the night settled down around them. When they parted at Mrs.
Hunt's door, she held the hand of her companion in a long clasp.

"God bless you, dear. The risen Christ dwells in your heart; from mine he has been barred. I see my mistake."

The next week was a busy one for Hunt's Corners. The Easter service was an assured fact. The children could talk of nothing else, and the parents were almost equally excited.

Mr. Hunt and his son felt the change in Elizabeth. They listened gladly when she told them of her interest in the coming service, but concerning the work she hoped to do in the future, her lips were silent. It was not so easy to speak, and she would wait until they saw that she was in earnest.

The service was to be held in a large room over the store. By ten o'clock on Easter morning it was packed. The walls were covered with evergreens and flags. Mrs.
Hunt's flowers had all been car-

Owning Big Horn Mountain Tunnel and Veneta Vein, 200 acres situated on the Western Slope of Pike's Peak, in the famous Cripple Creek Gold Mining District.

The Safest Offer Ever Made to Investors

100,000 Shares Preferred Stock at 25c per Share.

It is printed on each Certificate that subscribers to the above Preferred shares will be entitled to receive in Dividends the full amount of money invested, before other Stockholders receive any returns, signed by the President of the Company.

This District Produced More Gold in 1900 than any other in the U. S.

This property consists of 3000 by 3000 feet, or 200 acres, of gold land. The mine has been worked. The feature of this mine is the Veneta Vein, 30 to 40 ft.
in width, and is certainly one of the strongest veins in this famous district.
There are some fifteen openings on this vein, the ore from which assays in gold from $12 to $100 per ton. The property is advantageously located for developing by tunnel, which will make it possible to produce an enormous amount of ore daily, the quantity varying from 200 to 500 tons per day. The development by tunneling is the most economical and advantageous manner of working this property.

At a distance of 800 feet the TUNNEL will intersect the Veneta Vein at a depth of about 680 feet, and will also intersect several other veins. The TUN-NEL will cut the Big Horn Mountain 2100 feet deep, and will give this Company 2,000,000 tons of ore, worth over $20 per ton.

The new railroad, now practically completed from Colorado Springs, called the Colorado Springs & Cripple Creek road, passes within 2,000 ft. of this tunnel.
Adjoining this property is the Colorado Springs TUNNEL Company. In this property, at a depth of 400 feet, the Veneta Vein was cut. At this point the vein was fully 20 feet in width, and its value from $20 to $1,000 per ton.
There are already in operation mills and smelters sufficient to treat the output of this property, which gives at once cash returns.

Capital Stock $1,000,000. Par Value $1.00 per Share.

100,000 SHARES PREFERRED STOCK AT 25c. PER SHARE.

In buying this Stock the purchaser owns a direct title in the Company's property.
This Company offers you no watered stock, but a legitimate high grade gold mining investment in the Cripple Creek District.
After additional machinery is erected, this property will be earning dividends almost equal to its Capital Stock.

If our children love home and us, it is we who must win this love. They will love us because we first love them. The poorest of us can give ourselves to our children, can extend to them love parental; a love expressed in kindness, in patience, in courtesy, not indulgent love, void of rightful parental authority that only too often gratifies to his harm, but a thinking love that ever seeks his own good; that developing his best nature, makes him worthy of love. Let us make our children feel we are their best friends, let us ever give them sympathy—let us live with and for them. As their friends we can fend off associations and influences we do not approve of, so much more easily than we can simply as parents reaching down from some pedestal above them.

As their best friend, their confidant, we will have time to listen to their little confidences as they come to us with them from babyhood. They will be taken into our confidence and made to know it. They will see love in our faces, hear it in our voices, know it in our lives. Then when that tender age comes when they go from childhood to manhood or womanhood, when they so much need our wisest love and care, they will seek us and find us, they will know more than ever before why they love us. I have often thought that much more than infants do older children need the constant guidance and the demonstrations of love, which nearly all babies receive, and which for the most of them seems to grow less as the years go by.

I will take time in closing for one brief illustration of love's way. The time in the experience of one mother, as it does to many, when her boys began spending their evenings away from home. She knew it would not do, but she did not say so, nor oppose nor provoke them to anger in any way. When they came home for supper she had a merry greeting, an inviting supper, a pleasant topic for conversation, after which they found their friends had been invited to come to them under their own roof-tree. Again, there were games and amusements, or pleasant discussions in which the family joined, and music. It took a great deal of thought and work to make home attractive in every possible way, but the result was worth the effort it had cost. All the outside helps to one's own love should be obtained, as many as possible. Frugality, order, cheerfulness, amusement, art, music, books, friends and friendships. These all are powerful allies; but with these, our love must be the life and spirit of all, as love is the only channel through which we can reach other lives to bless them.

And now, if with abundant love, our own standards are high; if first, we feel the dignity of manhood or womanhood; if our thoughts are elevated regarding God's great gift of fatherhood and motherhood; if we live God's thought in the plan of life after him, in his pure way (for this plan of life—of new life and the family—is God's own plan) then will our homes be sanctuaries, sacred places, consecrated spots. Then will these ties be holy and inviolable. Our children will go out from these noble influences with pure, sweet thoughts for other homes; go out as standard bearers, as knights of the white cross of purity. From pure homes as fountain heads, will go out the ever widening streams of rightful influence to refresh and bless the human world, making stronger and fuller the love for home's sanctuary. When this is borne in upon the world, then will the desert blossom as a rose.

"Go make thy garden as fair as thou Thou workest never alone, (canst, Perchance he whose lot is next to thine May see it and mend his own."

Thus I hold it is the heart power of love, the purest mightiest force in the universe that leads to the heights. It is love, the life's highest duty, its sweetest grace, its benediction most divine.

The Mother's Health.

The child's dress should be plain and not elaborate. This makes a saving on the price of the material, on the work, in the laundry, and in the care of the child who is often hampered and fretted with the ruffles and embroideries, and made to feel various restraints in the endeavors to keep clean and preserve from other ravages the dainty apparel. A child should never be conscious of its clothes. Many mothers toil and deny themselves, even to the point of injuring their health, that they may satisfy their ambition to clothe their children in beautiful garments. They are led to do this from their social ambition and from their motherly love, which would lavish upon the child all that any child could have. The great temptations of mothers is to make dolls and puppets of their children. Fortunately to do this women do not have to work as hard as in other days, as children's dresses come ready-made and at reasonable prices, so that the maternal needle is not driven to such feats of embroidery and dress-making as formerly. Nevertheless the purchasing of the children's wardrobe and the care and mending which are necessary, are not among the least of the demands upon the mother's time. A mother once said to me, "I look at my little ones trotting off to school, and think that each child wears fifty button-holes that I have made."—Harper's Bazar.

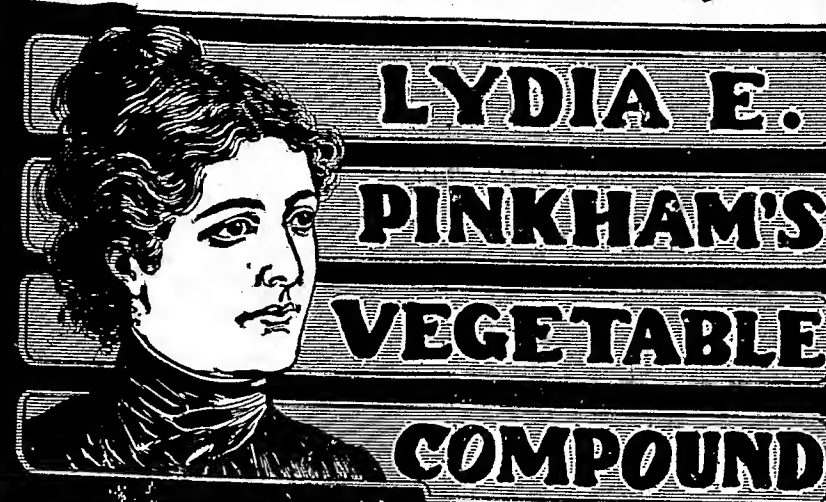

Summer Dressmaking.

Ordinary shirtwaists may be diversified in many simple ways. A favorite fancy at present is to edge the centre band with a full frilling an inch or more wide, and finished with a narrow hem or edging of lace. A simple shirtwaist design may be made elaborate by the introduction of insertion and tucks, set in straight, vertically or horizontally. Sleeves are not trimmed except in the case of cuff-bands or hemstitched flaps at wrist.

Wash skirts are most often finished with several ruffles or a deep flounce, cut upon the straight and made very full. The usual length for the single deep flounce is twelve inches, and the width allowed is from two to two and one-half times the width of the skirt. Bias ruffles are not used. Narrow ruffles are finished with the merest edge at the top, and the uppermost one of a group only is provided with a small heading. Deep flounces are usually put on with concealed headings. The same rules apply for putting any kind

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you a few months ago I had been suffering from inflammation of the ovaries and womb for over eighteen months. I had a continual pain and soreness in my back and side. I believe my troubles were caused by overwork and lifting some years ago. Life was a drag to me and I felt like giving up. I had several doctors, but they did me little good. I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four months ago and am in better health to-day than I have been for years. All my pains are gone. Your Vegetable Compound has made me well. I recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. S. J. Watson, Hampton, Va.

Leave the Shadows Behind.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbors' faults. Forget all the slander that you have ever heard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding and give little thought to the cause that provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels or histories which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are.

Obviate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet to-day, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only those things which are lovely and lovable. Thus you will make life better worth living.—Household.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN. All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market."

The Kitchen Range.

Gas is very much used these days for cooking purposes, and certainly it is a delightful method when compared to the difficult to manage coal range of a few years ago, but whether coal or gas be used, the kitchen range must be cleaned just as often to keep it bright and clean. If a coal range is used, the end of the day is the best time to clean and polish. After removing the ashes dust the range well and apply a little enamel polish (which is always moist and ready for use) with a damp flannel. Polish with a dry flannel or a brush if the range is a big one. The stove can be polished when warm, but not when very hot.

If gas is used for cooking purposes, before starting to clean the range the gas should be lighted for a couple of moments to heat the iron. Enamel polish prevents rust.

The same process of cleaning may be applied to stoves and fire grates.—American Queen.

A Pretty Compliment.

A woman foremost in the ranks of the serious writers and scholarly thinkers was guest of honor at a suburban club celebration not long ago. Her audience waited breathlessly for the pearls of wisdom and diamonds of advice sure to fall from her lips. Her address was scheduled toward the end of the programme, and when she finally arose to speak every eye was alive, every ear alert to catch her every word. Would she take her text from Emerson, Carlyle, Browning, Ibsen or Maeterlinck? Nietzsche, perhaps. "My dear friends and fellow club-wives," began the great woman in impressive tones, "before I say or do anything else"—the audience caught its breath—"I want to tell you that you're the best looking set of women that I've ever addressed."—New York Sun.

Bonnets For Children.

All young children wear the picturesque bonnets, the pokes and the round shapes made of shirred silk, velvet or cloth. The latter are almost too heavy even in the lightest cloths to be generally recommended. These bonnets are good things for winter wear, as the head fits close into the crown, and there is consequently sufficient warmth at the back of the head, while the flaring brim is very pretty and shows off the delicate features in a charmingly picturesque fashion. Bows of taffeta and satin ribbon or the clusters of ostrich tips the same shade as the bonnet, and the little wreath of roses inside or a few small roses put in through the ruche that surrounds the face are the favorite trimmings.—Harper's Bazar.

They Make Work Easy.

The work in the kitchen, so far as the culinary labor is concerned, will be lightened for many women if they took advantage of the numerous housekeeping conveniences which manufacturers and inventors have placed on the market in recent years. Many of these articles are inexpensive and will last a long time with care. Among them may be classed double roasting pans, meat choppers, vegetable cutters, patent potato masher, apple corer, double boilers, improved pie and cake tins, wire dishcloth, balanced oil cans, measuring cups, wire egg beater, wire broiler, steamers of various kinds, fruit press, frying basket, glass lemon squeezer and granite ware, which has replaced the old time heavy iron for kettles and saucepans.

Queen Victoria's Bridal Gown.

The dress worn by Queen Victoria at her marriage would almost be voted simple in these times of wonderful broadcades and jeweled embroideries. It was of rich, plain white satin and had a very long train, which was carried by a dozen bridesmaids, daughters of dukes, marquises and earls. The trimming was composed of that beautiful holly lace which has become historical, for it has figured in many portraits of her majesty. The headpiece consisted of an ordinary wreath of orange blossoms and a lace veil. The jewels were a brooch, necklace and large, long earrings of diamonds.

The alleged defiance of Uncle Sam by little Venezuela sounds like, and should be treated as, a joke. A single regiment of our national guard could whip the government of Venezuela out of its boots, if it wears any.

It is well known that in the past few years by the use of the Air Drill and the Electric Drill the cost of Gold mining has been reduced from 50% to 80%; that by improved machinery and chemical processes the extraction of gold and silver from the ore has also been equally reduced; that all items of expense connected with mining have been so materially reduced that mining has passed from the condition of being a mere venture to that of one of the most profitable occupations. Money now put into a conservative, legitimate mining company is not a "Gamble" but an investment.

A gloom, such as we have seldom been obliged to experience, was cast over the school by the news of Miss Maud Mayo's death. Although many of her pupils have now left school, there are still several remaining who remember with tenderness her cheerful face and manner, and happy way of infusing all with whom she came in contact, with spirit and enthusiasm. A piece of flowers was sent by her old pupils as a token of the love and admiration with which she is held in remembrance.

AN EMINENT PHYSICIAN CURED BY DR. GREENE'S NERVURA.

DR. W. D. TANNER, CURED BY DR. GREENE'S NERVURA.

Here is the strongest possible testimonial of cure, the restoration to health of a widely known and eminent physician, W. D. Tanner, M.D., of 380 Idaho St., Denver, Colo., who graduated in the Allopathic School of Medicine in 1852 and practiced medicine for twenty-five years. He was sick and nothing helped him until he used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Now he is well and strong, hearty and vigorous, and he tells the world of his remarkable cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura in order that all who are sick, suffering, run and be promptly restored to health.

Dr. W. D. Tanner says: "When in the City of Mexico I was sun struck, which paralyzed my nervous system and left me a wreck. Since that time all through life I have had to avoid all the pursuits of life where one is liable to be overcome by heat. I have taken care of myself, and used remedies prescribed by doctors until old age and general debility came upon me. I then became constipated, had involuntary twitches of the muscles, palpitation of the heart, torpid liver, and indigestion, and could not sleep, and my appetite failed me.

"Under these conditions I was seeking after a good cathartic, when a friend advised me to try a bottle of Dr. Greene's Laxura Cathartic Pills. I did so and the result was entirely satisfactory. I then procured a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I have been using it ever since. Since that time I must confess to all the world that I enjoy better health now than I have for the past fifty years.

"My hearing, taste, and smell, and sight are good; my appetite and digestion are all right; I sleep well, and I must say that these physical changes have taken place within me under the influence of Dr. Greene's medicines; hence, I can truthfully recommend Dr. Greene's medicines to all people who are afflicted with nervous diseases, and to all working people who are exposed to changes of heat and cold.

"I was always prejudiced against patent medicines, but must confess that since using Dr. Greene's remedies I feel as well as I did in my younger days."

All who are nervous, weak, tired, exhausted in nerve power and physical strength; who are sleepless, wake tired and unrefreshed, without strength and energy for the day's work; who have poor blood, rheumatism, headache, backache, dyspepsia, indigestion, gas, bloating, faint feelings, loss of appetite, kidney or liver complaint will find great relief and permanent cure in Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

This great remedy of the people is the prescription of the most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases. Its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

One of Adriance, Platt & Co's. travelling men was in town this week. In his care was a box a foot square, containing a model moving-machine in colors of green and gold, with pole of mahogany. The roads are treacherous; horse and driver may think they are on sure foundation, when lo, they are in; the result being that horses are unharnessed, pulled back to terra firma, with perchance only a fender broken, or if a loaded team, the load must be taken off and unloaded ere they can go on; sometimes it is a sleigh-load of three that is neatly turned over. It would be laughable were it not lamentable.

An Appeal for the Maine State Sanatorium Association.

December 26, 1900, at a meeting of the citizens of the State interested in the matter, the Maine State Sanatorium Association was legally organized and incorporated under the general laws of the State. The objects of the Association, as stated in the constitution, are "to establish and maintain a public institution, or institutions, for the isolation, treatment, and cure of persons affected with pulmonary disease, and to exert its influence toward the lessening of the prevalence of tuberculosis."

This is a corporation in which there are no shareholders and in which there will be no dividends. The officers give their services free of charge. The sole aim of the Association is the furnishing of temporary help and treatment to persons, the most of whom must prematurely die, unless a helping hand is extended to them.

The following are the officers of the Association:

President—Hon. John F. Hill, Governor of Maine, Augusta.
Vice-President—Gen. Selden Connor, Ex-Governor, Augusta.

Secretary—A. G. Young, M. D., Augusta.
Treasurer—Treby Johnson, Cashier Granite National Bank, Augusta.

Trustees—
Dr. F. C. Thayer, Waterville.
Hon. P. O. Vickery, Augusta.
Hiram W. Ricker, Poland Springs.
A. W. Hall, Caribou.

Hon. F. C. Whitehouse, Topsham.
Hon. F. O. Beal, Bangor.
Hon. Waldo Pettengill, Rumford Falls.

Dr. S. H. Weeks, Portland.
George Bliss, Esq., Waldoboro.

The management of the financial and other affairs of the Association is vested in the trustees.

To anyone who knows the business men of this State, not a word is needed to convince him that any money or other property put in the care of the trustees for the use of the Association will be properly safeguarded and judiciously expended.

To the present time more than 260 persons have become members of the Association. The annual contributions or fees from the members constitute a more drop in the bucket. Unless persons of means will nobly come to the rescue there must be a disheartening delay and the unnecessary waste of valuable human lives must go on.

The special and urgent need of the Association is a fund to enable it to build and equip a sanatorium for the cure of consumptives, and a second need, hardly more remote, is an endowment fund which will make possible the utmost usefulness of the institution. While it may not be best to offer free board and treatment to all classes of patients, the desire of the trustees is that needy persons in the early and curable stage of consumption may not be turned from the door of the sanatorium, simply because they are poor.

Will the reader of this think a moment of the vital importance of the work which the Maine State Sanatorium Association has set itself to do, and of its need of help?

More than one thousand of us here in the State of Maine are every year dying of a pestilence which is not an incurable one. A large percentage of these persons might be cured right here near their own homes. Is there anything which should more quickly appeal to our sympathies than this work? And is there any good cause to the support of which we should more promptly rally, whether we can spare one dollar or thousands?

Aside from the immediate want of funds is the need of a large membership of men and women in all parts of the State. Will the reader of this kindly receive it as an invitation to become a member of the Association? By so doing his influence will be a help and an encouragement which will be highly appreciated. If more is done than to pay the annual membership fee so long as he chooses to remain a member, it will be entirely voluntary on his part. The annual membership fee, a contribution in aid of the proposed sanatorium, is one dollar.

This appeal is sent out by the secretary of the Association with a feeling of confidence that those persons who are able to do so will generously help a cause which is so worthy, and for which help is so urgently needed.

The Maine State Sanatorium Association, under the authority of a recent act of the Legislature, "is authorized and empowered, for the purposes of the organization, to receive, take, and hold, by deed, devise, bequest, or otherwise, property, personal and real, in any amount without limit."

Respectfully,
A. G. YOUNG, M. D.,
Secretary of Maine State Sanatorium Association.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits."

Timid Woman, Callous Brute.

There is an F street real estate man whose pretty home is in one of the pleasantest streets in the older part of town. He is just an ordinary man, with no particular sympathy for the fears of nervous women; he has been married 15 years, and his wife is one of those women who fairly revel in all sorts of painful imaginings and frightful forebodings. She always makes her will when she starts on a journey, and she never fails to forgive all her enemies before she trusts herself behind any kind of a horse. There has not been a night in all the 15 years of her married life that she hasn't either smelled smoke or heard burglars. Last week, in the middle of one night, the husband felt the familiar pinch which for 15 years has calloused his arm. He heard the familiar voice say the same old words:

"Oh, Charles! Do get up! I smell smoke!"

As usual, for after 15 years of that sort of thing even an ordinary man learns not to argue with a woman, he climbed obediently out of bed and went to the window. The street below was full of people, and a fire engine was puffing away at the corner.

"Oh, Charles!" called the wife. "Is the house on fire?"

Fifteen years have made Charles' feelings as callous as his arm.

"Yes," said he brutally, "thank goodness the house is on fire at last. Now perhaps you'll stop worrying."—Washington Post.

Daniel O'Connell's Fees.

In the National Library of Ireland is the fee book of Daniel O'Connell. This volume, in its 100 pages or so of parallel columns, laboriously prepared by the hand of the liberator himself, shows in pounds, shillings and pence his early struggles.

O'Connell was called to the Irish bar in 1795—the year of the rebellion—and seven days later he got his first brief, from a brother-in-law, who retained him to draft a declaration on a promissory note. The only other business he got that year was also given him by a kinsman—a cousin—and it was of the same kind.

The fee on each occasion was £1 2s. 9d. It was in one of his earliest cases that O'Connell made the retort that attracted attention to him. He was cross-examining an awkward witness, who declared that he had drunk nothing but his share of a pint of whisky. "On your oath, now," thundered the young counsel, "was not your share all but the pewter?"

O'Connell's fee book is an interesting record of his rapid rise in the profession. For the first year, as we have seen, his income amounted to only £2 5s. 6d. Next year he earned over £50, and the year after he made over £100. According to memoranda made in his own handwriting his income in 1803 was £465, and in the following years, £775, £840, £1,077, £1,713, £2,103, £2,730, £2,031, £3,047 and £3,808 respectively.

Gentlemen—Having had a very serious illness with inflammatory rheumatism for nearly a year past, and having received no benefit from the many medicines I had used, and on the persuasion of a friend who had used one of your belts for rheumatism, I purchased one of your belts and have worn it for the past two months, from which I have received more benefit and relief than at any previous time, and feel confident that the continued use will wholly cure me in a short time.

The Awakening of Hunt's Corner.

ried there. Many of those present had not seen a flower since the death of the last wild ones, months before.

"And I have selfishly kept them all to myself," Mrs. Hunt thought. "Henceforth they shall not be my flowers; they shall blossom for Hunt's Corners."

There was singing, the repeating of the Lord's Prayer, and recitations by the children. Elizabeth noted how the care-worn faces of the mothers lighted with pride. She had forgotten that these mothers loved even as she loved.

There was a murmur of surprise when Mrs. Hunt came forward, a Bible in her hand. She was neatly dressed in gray, with creamy lace at neck and wrists.

In a clear, sweet voice she read the story of the wondrous Easter morning, as found in the writings of the evangelists. Men and women listened with bated breath.

"I am not worthy to carry this blessed message," she went on. "All these years I have lived among you—I who professed to be a disciple of this Christ. I have lived for myself. I have not cared to carry to you these glad tidings, neither have I shared your burdens and griefs. The one you all love—your teacher—showed me my mistake. I have asked God to forgive me. On this glad Easter morning Christ is risen in my heart. From this time I am truly his. To be his is to be your sister and helper."

She paused. Tears were trickling down many faces. After a little she spoke again, her voice low and broken.

"My heart goes out to you. I want to help you. I want to work with you for these boys and girls—your children and mine. The greatest blessing I can bring you is to lead you to Christ who died for us, and, on Easter morning, rose from the grave. Oh, my friends, is there not some one here who will now accept this Christ as their Saviour?"

There was a moment's breathless silence. Then, through happy tears, Elizabeth Hunt saw among the dozen who were standing her husband and son.

This was four years ago. The Hunts are still in their northern home, although Hubert is in college, fitting himself for the ministry.

Hunt's Corners is a changed place. The schoolhouse is enlarged; there is a handsome church, a lecture hall and a free library. There is a population of self-respecting men and women who are making for themselves comfortable homes. Many of these are earnest Christians.

And Elizabeth Hunt? She is a happy woman. "The mother of the town," she is often called. She dates her busy, beautiful life from the Easter awakening of Hunt's Corners.—American Messenger.

The blood is constantly being purified by the lungs, liver and kidneys. Keep these organs in a healthy condition and the bowels regular and you will have no need of a blood purifier. "It's very discouraging," said the young man. "I confess that at times I considered myself a genius."

"But perhaps you are," suggested his friend, soothingly.

"Impossible. I explained my plans to half a dozen hard-headed, practical men, and not one of them seemed to think I was a blamed fool."

Doan's Kidney Pills

Others all around him have been cured of kidney complaint by this wonderful little remedy. He has the testimony of others to guide him. He KNOWS that Doan's Kidney Pills WILL cure, no matter what form of kidney complaint he may have.

He learns this by reading emphatic evidence like the following:

Mr. H. J. Woodbury, carpenter, of 37 South Chestnut street, Augusta, Me., says:

"I was interviewed in the spring of 1896 by a gentleman who asked me for my experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills. I told him that I had been greatly benefited by the action of my kidneys, that the slightest cold always settled there and produced intense suffering, and that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured me. It is now two years and a half since I was first interviewed, and I can conscientiously say, the longer and more fully you know Doan's Kidney Pills the greater faith you have in them. Everyone, as far as I have heard, speaks in the highest terms of their great value."

They bought a large sized bottle of their druggists and it benefited or cured them (the above is not an idle statement, but the result of careful investigation).

You can do the same thing. If you are in doubt as to whether you have trouble with your kidneys or bladder, put some of your urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment, or a milky, cloudy appearance, if it is ropy or stringy, pale or discolored, you should lose no time in taking Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it can be had of all druggists at $1.00 a large bottle, or six bottles for $5.00. CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

The Chestnut Colt.

The chestnut colt lived in Long Pasture, and he had for several months been getting more and more wild and unsociable. This was because his mother had been telling him dreadful tales of how, when he grew old enough, some men would come and catch him and put a piece of iron in his mouth, leather straps all over him, iron shoes on his feet and fasten him in front of a wagon, and then he would have to mind and do as he was told or he would be beaten with a cruel whip. The chestnut colt had always, during the three years of his life, done just as he pleased, so his mother's stories made him very unhappy, and he would kick viciously at any man who came near him, so fearful was he that he might be forced to enter the dreadful captivity of which he had heard so much. The farmer who owned him and his mother, finding he could do nothing with the lively young animal, wished to sell him, but so far had found no purchaser.

But, in spite of his dislike of people in general, the chestnut colt was very fond of one person, Charlie, the son of the farmer. Charlie brought him apples, and once in a great while, salt or sugar, and the colt, as he rubbed his soft nose against the boy's head, wished that all the people in the world were like this little friend of his, who, he felt sure, would never do anything to hurt a poor horse. The boy was the only person who dared enter the field with the colt, and they two had many a merry time together.

Now it happened that in the very next field to Long Pasture was kept a very large and savage bull which, it is rumored, had in his time killed several men. Even Charlie, much as he loved animals, dared not venture near him. The farmer had noticed that the fence between Long Pasture and the field where the bull was confined needed repairing, but there was so much to do during the harvest that it was left until some less busy season, and it was this neglect that caused what might have been a serious accident.

One day Charlie, as usual, had gone down to see the chestnut colt and he and the pretty animal (who seemed to enjoy the sport quite as well as the boy) were playing a game of tag, chasing each other around the field, when their play was interrupted by a crash and a tremendous roar. The colt galloped swiftly away, but Charlie turned to find himself confronted by the savage bull, which had broken down the fence and was charging straight for him. He screamed loudly for help, but his father and the men were at work in a far distant field and could not hear him. There was no tree which he could climb, no place where he could conceal himself from the terrible death which was threatened him. In the distance he heard a terrible shriek, and recognized the voice of his mother who happened at that moment to be at one of the windows of the farmhouse and was a witness of all that followed.

Seeing no way of escape, Charlie gave himself up for lost and threw himself on the ground, expecting every moment to be trampled upon and then gored and tossed by the enraged animal, but presently finding that he was still alive, he cautiously raised his head to see what was happening.

The bull was just where he had last seen him, and in front of him, dancing here and there and dodging the cruel horns while he now and again platted telling blows with his shapely little hind hoofs, was the chestnut colt! And the bull was getting the worst of the combat, for he was too heavy and clumsy to turn easily, and his enemy always avoided his charges, while the active colt could wheel and assault him in the most unexpected places.

Charlie lay for some time an intensely interested spectator, but at length the bull seemed to weary of the one-sided duel and turned and trotted back to his pasture, quite as though nothing had happened.

Seeing that he was no longer dangerous, Charlie propped up the broken section of fence and then ran as quickly as he could to his father, to whom he related all that had taken place. At first the farmer could scarcely believe the tale, but the broken fence and the trampled spot in Long Pasture, where the battle had waged, as well as his wife's account, soon convinced him of its truth.

As for the brave little chestnut colt, there was no longer any talk of selling him. The farmer gave him to Charlie for his very own, and, although he has now been broken to harness for several years, his master has never yet touched a whip to his glossy hide.

The Skill of a Mouse.

One day a naturalist lay motionless on a fallen log in the forest, and silently watched an animal at play in the grass near by. This was a large, brown-backed mouse—a meadow mouse, that had come out from his home under the log, and when tired of play, had set up to make his toilet. Using his forepaws as hands, the mouse combed the white fur on his breast, and licked himself smooth and sleek. Satisfied at length with his appearance, he began to search for food.

He did not have far to go, for a few stalks of wheat grew among the thick weeds near at hand. The mouse was so large that he could probably have bent the stalk down and brought the grain within reach. If not, he could certainly have climbed the stalk. He did not try either of these plans, however, for these were not his ways. Sitting up very straight, he bit through the stalk as high up as he could reach. The weeds were so thick that the straw could not fall its length; and the freshly cut end settled down upon the ground, with the straw still erect and the grain out of reach. The mouse again bit the straw in two, and again the upper portion settled down. In this way he bit off five lengths of the straw before he could bring the grain within reach of his paws. These forepaws were very skillful little hands; and he deftly husked a grain and ate it, sitting erect, and holding it to his mouth as naturally as a boy would hold an apple.—Our Animal Friends.

Ten Rules of Politeness.

1. To be polite is to have a kind regard for the feelings and rights of others.
2. Be as polite to your parents, brothers, sisters and schoolmates as you are to strangers.
3. Look people fairly in the eyes when you speak to them or they speak to you.
4. Do not bluntly contradict anyone.
5. It is not discourteous to refuse to do wrong.
6. Whispering, laughing, chewing gum or eating at lectures, in school, or at places of amusement is rude and vulgar.
7. Be doubly careful to avoid any rudeness to strangers, such as calling out to them, laughing or making remarks about them. Do not stare at visitors.
8. In passing a pen, pencil, knife or pointer, hand the blunt end toward the one who receives it.
9. When a classmate is reciting do not raise your hand until after he has finished.
10. When you pass directly in front of any one or accidentally annoy him say: "Excuse me," and never fail to say: "Thank you" for the smallest favor. On no account say "Thanks."

DEAR EDITOR:—

I like to read the Children's Corner very much. I have one brother and that is all of us. For pets I have one kitten, a cow, and a horse. My brother has a cat. My brother's name is Halan M. Andrews; he is seven years old and I'm ten years old. I cook some. I help mamma every day. Mamma isn't very well. I have an organ. I have good times sliding. My kitten goes out sliding with me. I will close with a riddle and here it is: Black upon black and black upon brown, three legs up and six legs down.

MISS EVA BURL ANDREWS.

"Is he a young man of brains?" inquired an old gentleman respecting a swell youth.

"Well, really," said his daughter, "I don't know. I never met him anywhere except in society."

of a corporation. I have no fault to find with the fundamental idea of combination for economic purposes. I think it is scientifically correct. But only when men cease to distinguish between a conscience which they employ as individuals and the one they employ as parts of a corporation will the evils which grow out of combinations be remedied. I have argued thus to point out the fact that the man who is idle because he is forced into it by circumstances which he cannot control any more than he can control the sunlight, is not adjudged guilty by my topic, but that those who control the labor of a man, who limit—through personal and selfish desires—his powers of production, may be committing, and are committing when they so do, one of the gravest crimes against what is written deep in the imperishable order of creation and the very texture of the human soul.

If those who have the power to supply means through which Industry manifests itself, and create opportunities for the physical energies of men, would consider at what a risk, at what a cost of social and moral strength they are accumulating their material wealth, I think that the relation of Capital and Labor would be changed, and the commercial and industrial world would take on a brighter aspect and be blessed with a healthier atmosphere. A man or a body of men who can control the labor or the material condition of another man controls to a greater extent than we sometimes realize, his moral character also. And upon such men, and such bodies of men, it is the business, it seems to me, of social and moral reformers to press the great fundamental, creative principle which the first proposition of my topic embodies. If for material advantages a man or body of men, selfishly and inconsiderately forces idleness upon another man, they commit crime very flagrantly violating one of the most important laws which lie at the base of a happy and healthy social order. But equally criminal is the man who is idle through choice, either because he has material wealth enough to support his idleness, or because he is thoroughly and constitutionally lazy. He is nothing less than a potter on who seeks to couch his idleness beneath the abominable notion that the world owes him a living. Lucky for that man that there is such a thing as Christian charity in the world. It is a wonder that the trees and the rocks, and the hills do not cry out against him. It is wonder that the animals do not run him, and the sun and moon and stars hide their light when he looks up at them. But the man who hasn't the sense enough to blush and shame when he makes that while we are here taught the innity and sanctity of labor, we told by the second proposition ore us that "Industry without is brutality". There is a condi-a attaching to our labors or the y thing upon which our primal to an existence is based, that bring us to the level of the ates. Into the task,—whatever —that a man's condition brings him, he must put his whole it, and the very best spirit of ch he is capable. So far as lais concerned, this is what really erentiates him from the horse

As a matter of fact it is this animalism in labor that makes more than half the trouble between those who buy labor and those who sell, it. Do you argue that a man cannot put Art into labor, because his labor is too insignificant, or conditions are such that this spirit is ground out of him? It is lie. For if intelligence in a man is one of the least whit more consequence than the intelligence of a horse, he must put an intelligent spirit into it. One of the leading sociologist of to-day tells us that when we despise a necessary task we shun and spoil it. No work can be done finely unless it is thought to be dignified." And right here, I think, is where the most of us make a very serious blunder. We cut what to us seem slight and menial, and unimportant tasks, loose from the industrial order in which men find their material blessings. The man who for want of the proper spirit habitually slights his work whatever it is, is unworthy of anything better, no matter what his capabilities are. The words of John Ruskin on this point are well worthy our attention. "We are not sent into this world to do anything in which we cannot put our hearts. We have certain work to do for our bread, and that is to be done strenuously; other work to do for our delight, and that is to be done heartily; neither is to be done by halves or shifts, but with a will; and what is not worth this effort is not to be done at all." That is that putting Art into labor means, and the man who does not put his Art into his Industry, so far as his labor is concerned, he cannot by any process of reasoning; cannot by the power of any law make himself any better than the horse who instinctively, but nevertheless blindly, bends himself to the load put upon him. Brutality in this connection is simply the lack of appreciation of the dignity of any sort of legitimate work.

I have said nothing about the effect of Art in Industry upon the individual character. Before such intelligent audience this is unnecessary. Let me repeat the statement with which I began, for will bear treasuring in all our thoughts and lives, "Life without Industry is Guilt."

"Industry without Art is Brutality." I should be happy indeed to know that in arguing out this statement, as I have tried to do, I succeeded in fixing in all our minds the fundamental creative principles of the first part of the statement so that it would forever free us from any criminal idleness that might spoil our lives, and the full truth of the second part of the statement, so that it would forever prevent any task dragging down to the level of the brute creation.
